Design No. H182

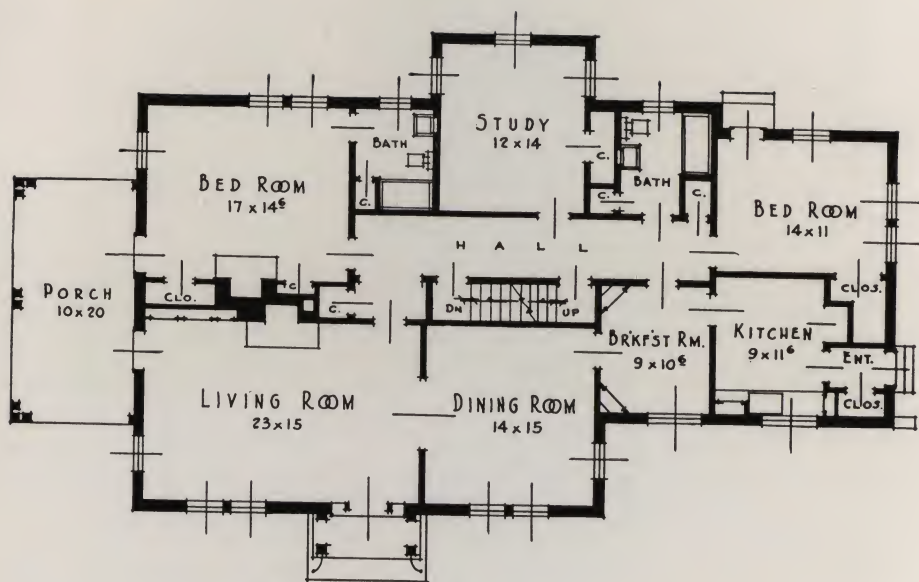

Here is a delightful one-story Colonial home. The white painted brick gives this house real character.

This plan is ample in every respect. All the rooms are fair sized. There is a comfortable semi-private porch and a large central hall.

The study is well located and affords a view in three directions.

Where would one find a more pleasing home anywhere than this large Cape Cod house? From end to end, individuality is the note.

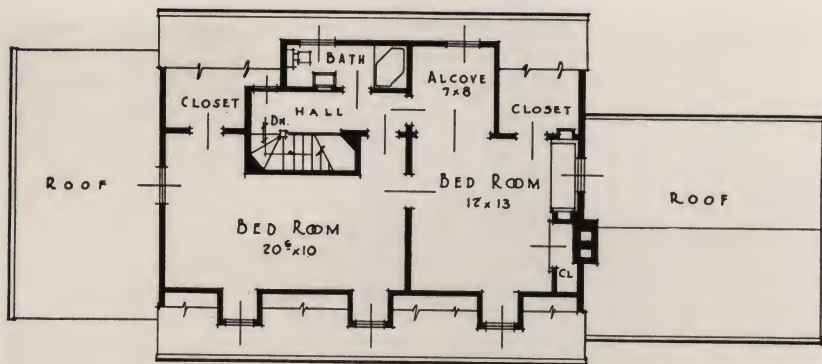

There is the delightful, roomy porch. Note the clever treatment of the garage doors opening to the front.

The heating plant is above ground, eliminating the necessity of a basement.

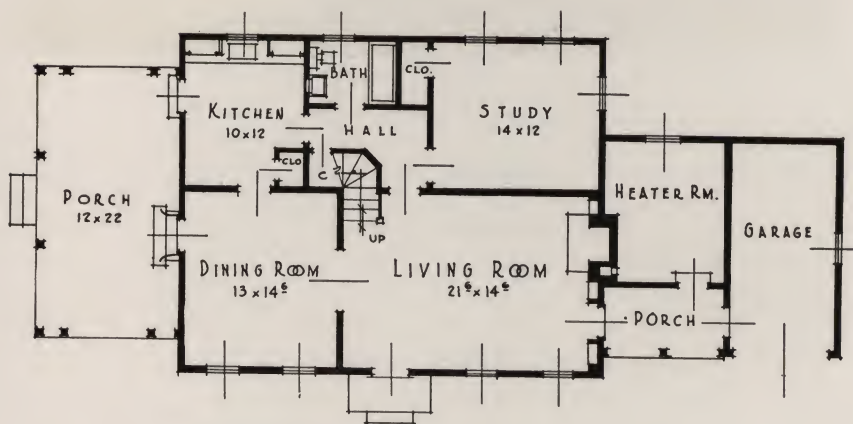

The ample study is well located. The large second floor bedrooms would be really livable.

The Colonial story-and-a-half house presents this style in its more formal tone. The porch, though in evidence from the front, gives a desired semi-privacy.

The study is ample and well located. The one bedroom downstairs is needed for emergency. Couldn't the large corner breakfast room be a delight for many meals when there was no company?

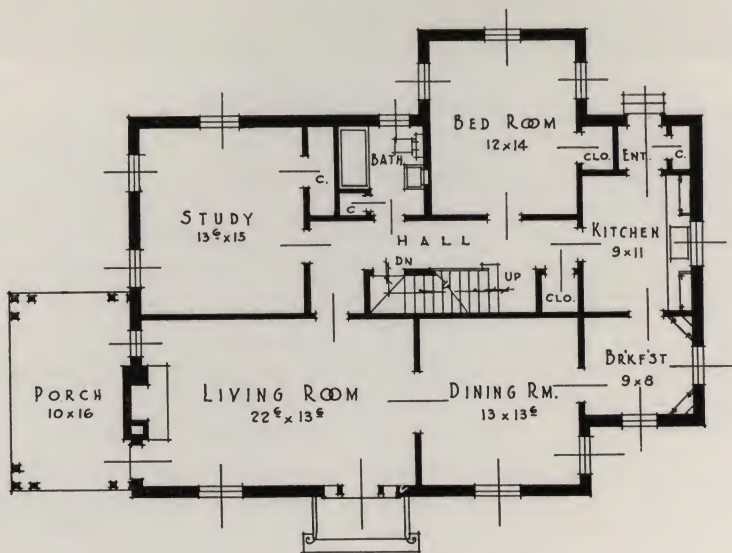

The den on the second floor would prove a room of many uses.

Design No. H335

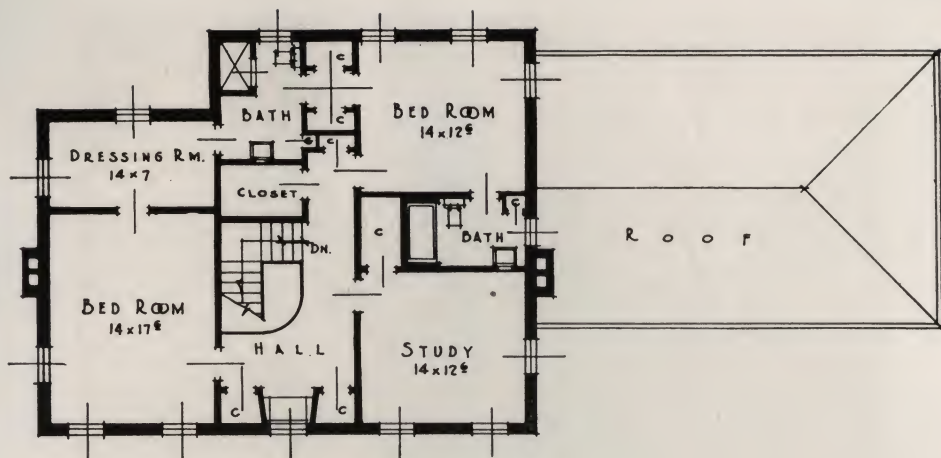

This sizable two-story house is good, traditional Colonial design both in exterior and plan.

All rooms are large. There is a two-car connecting garage. The living room opens onto the garden.

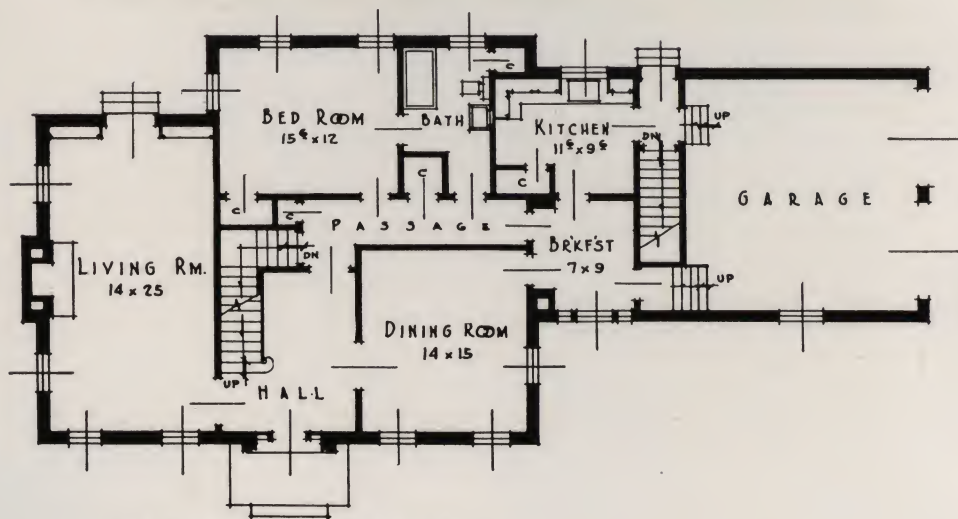

In this plan the study is located on the second floor, which would make for the greatest privacy.

Here is the plan of a home any church could point to with pride and say, "There is our pastor's home."

The exterior is true southern Colonial. The plan matches this style with a great central hall. All rooms are sized proportionately large. A marvelous study with fireplace and built-in-shelves is indicated. There is a two-car garage.

The second floor affords four bedrooms and ample bath facilities.

This is a pleasing Colonial treatment of the story-and-a-half house. The screened porch so evident in the picture is a very enjoyable feature in a great part of our territory.

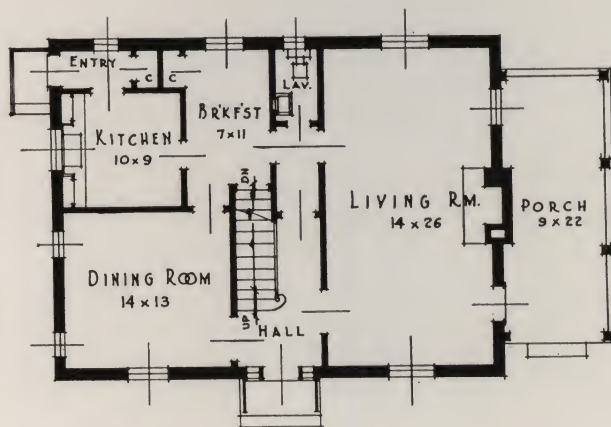

The first floor plan is typically Colonial—the central entrance hall with large living room and dining room on either side. The second floor has been fully utilized and will provide a very usable space for sleeping quarters and study when the entire roof is insulated.

This is a clever Cape Cod cottage. The white shingled walls give a true character to this little gem.

In plan there is not an inch of lost space, yet there is every necessary feature. The delightful porch at the side affords a degree of privacy. The study is well located and ample.

Design No. H366

Here we have a traditional two-story Colonial home, formal entrance, large central hall, and semi-private porch.

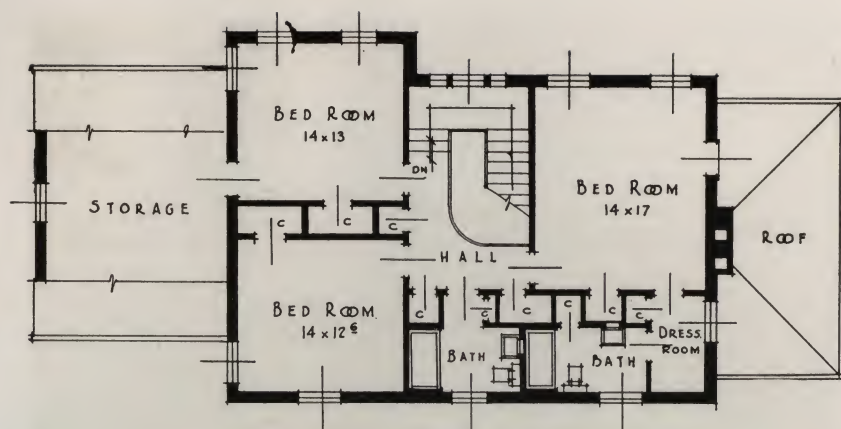

The amply lighted study with connecting lavatory is well situated, opening onto the hall.

The sleeping quarters have been thoughtfully planned. There are ample bath facilities. Note the large storage space.

A thoroughly American cottage with a modern note present. The plan is very compact and efficient. The study is convenient to the living room.

The ample porch with entrance door and paneled windows opening onto it is a most inviting feature.

This small house containing only 1,240 square feet of floor space will attract the attention of many churches because of its many desirable features.

Ample space for comfortable living has been provided in all areas, including much storage space. Additional storage space in the attic is made available by use of a disappearing stair in the hall.

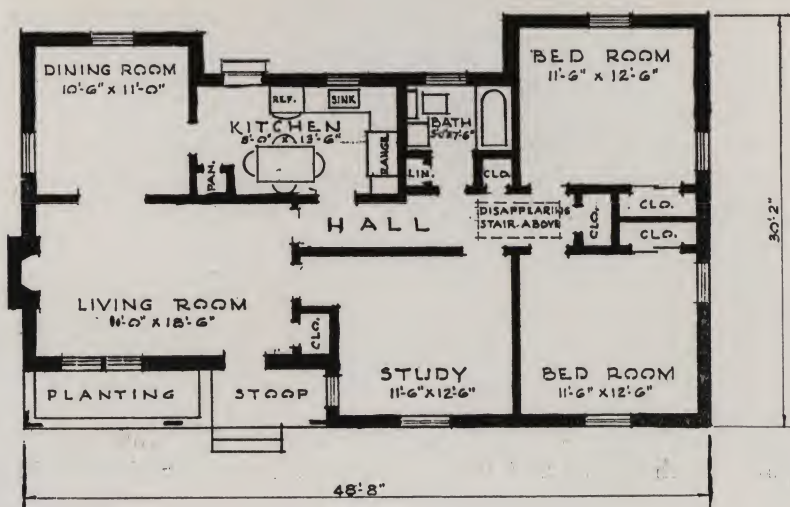

The fireplace is optional, as can be seen by studying the photograph above and the sketches on the other side of this sheet.

A church with limited means will do well to study this plan.

While not oversized in its total area of 1,325 square feet, all rooms are well proportioned. Special attention has been given to providing a large kitchen with a well placed breakfast table.

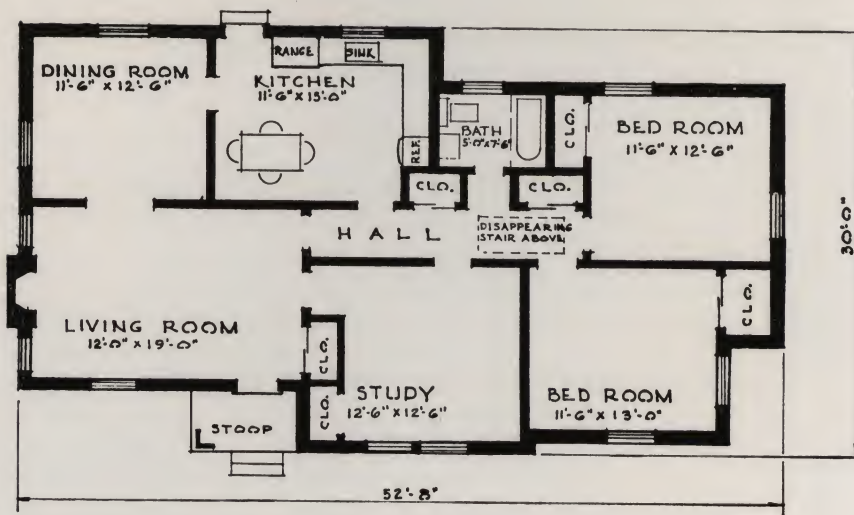

One entire wall in the large study can be used for book shelves.

Design No. H2533

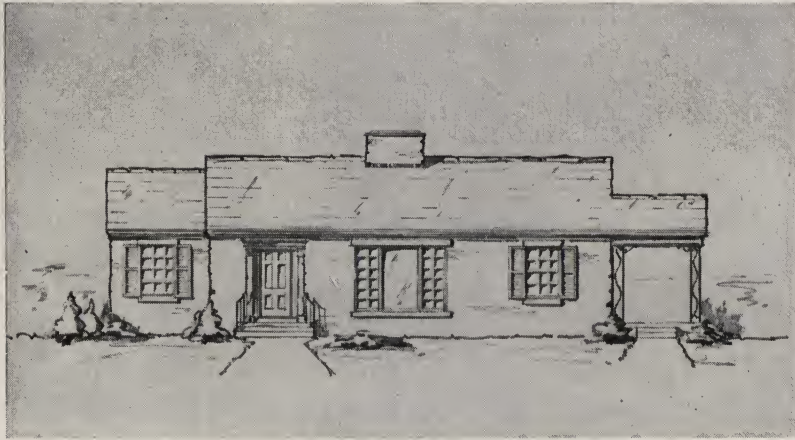

For compact arrangement, this plan is excellent; but all rooms are generous in size.

The living room—dining room area is spacious and would be adequate for entertaining large groups. Circulation throughout the house has been planned to give privacy in these rooms.

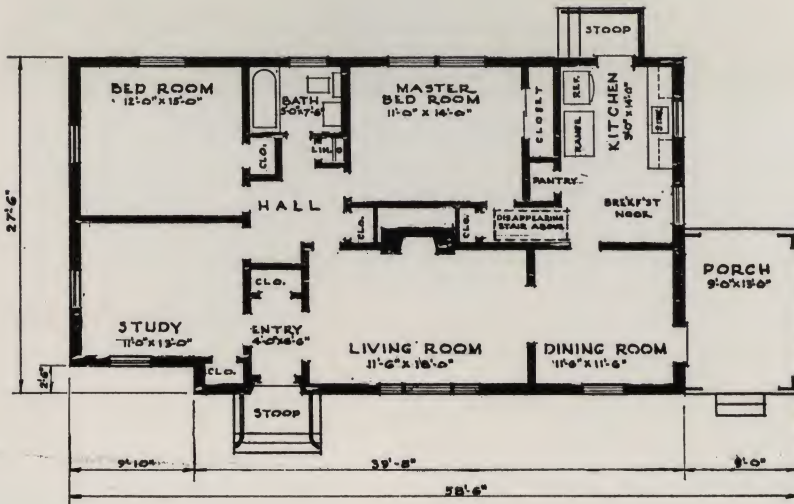

The area of this plan is 1,403 square feet.

This attractive home shows how a variety of exterior materials may be skillfully combined. The planting area beneath the study windows, the porch, and the rear terrace must not be overlooked.

A worthy feature of the master bedroom is its private bath.

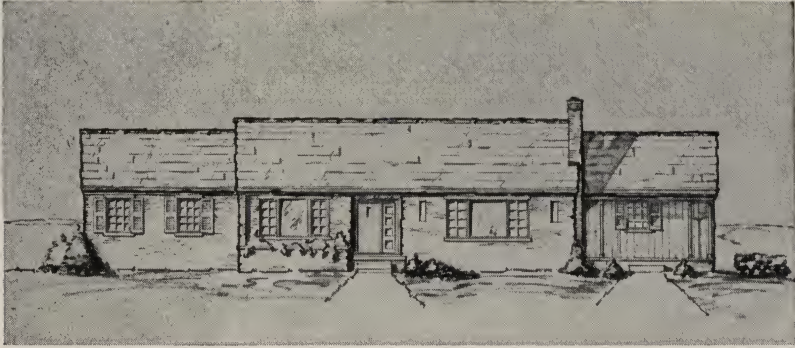

Note the conveniently located kitchen, with its well planned working area.

The photograph above shows how this plan has been reversed to capitalize upon the existing native features afforded by the plot of ground.

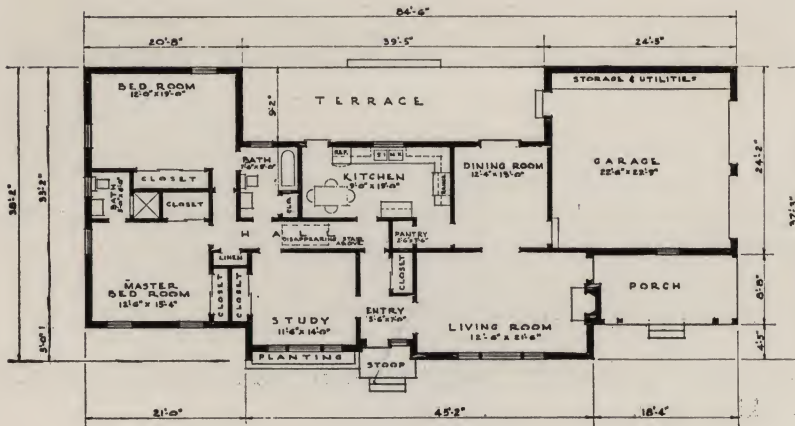

Total square footage in this plan is 2,089. The terrace contains 356 square feet.

A pleasing approach to this ranch style house is afforded by the sheltered stoop. Wraps of the guests are conveniently cared for in the entry closet.

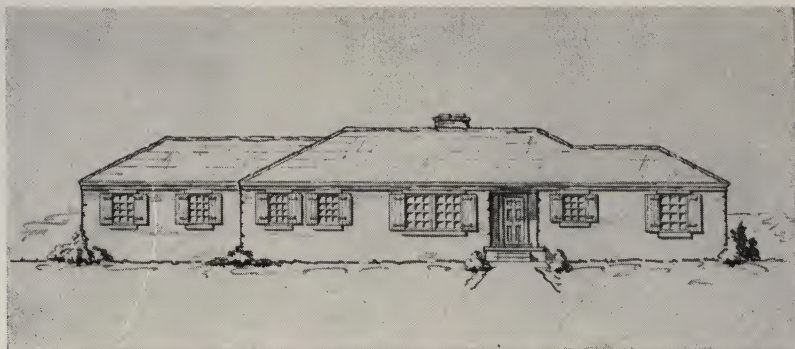

The spacious living room is centrally located and features a large fireplace.

Additional length is obtained by making the two car garage an integral part of the house.

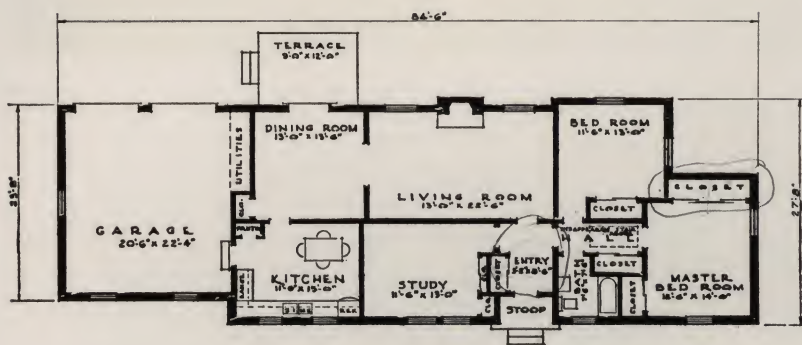

Floor area of the house is 2,225 square feet. This is exclusive of the outdoor dining terrace.

This attractive ranch type home has a well arranged floor plan which permits easy circulation between the rooms.

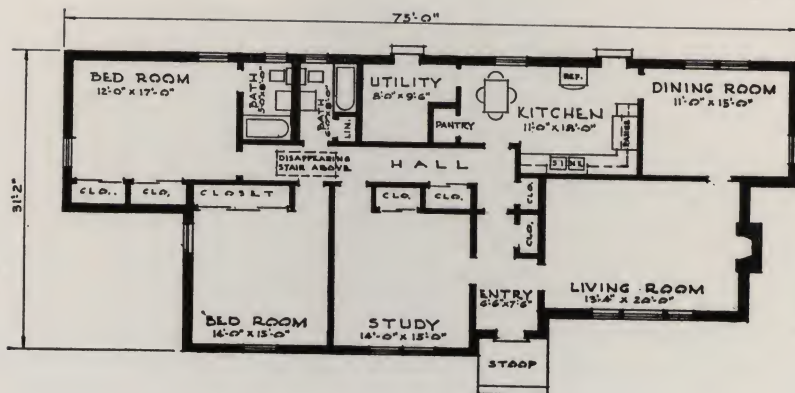

Access to the study is direct from the entry. With carefully selected furnishings it could be used as a guest room.

Utility and storage space have been adequately provided.

The total area of this plan is 1,924 square feet.

This three bedroom arrangement, with its large master bedroom, will appeal to many.

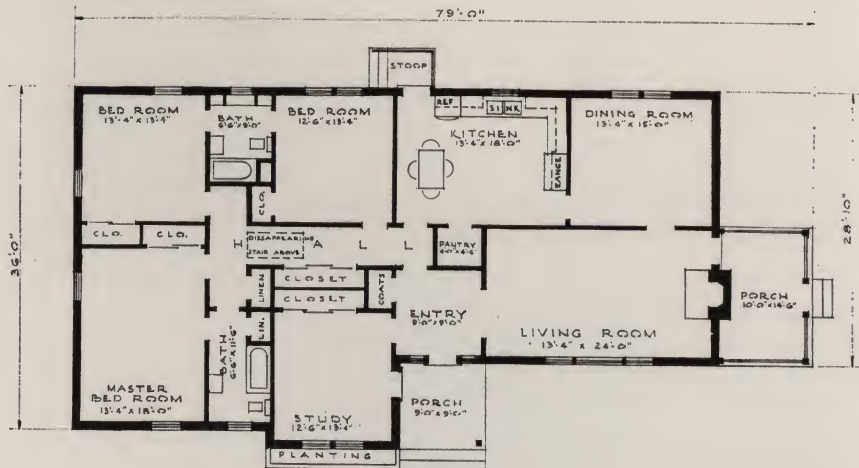

The spacious entry hall will give a gracious welcome to guests. The living room is large and inviting.

An abundance of closet and storage space has been provided.

The total area in this plan is 2,389 square feet.

A modest appearance has been achieved in exterior treatment, but special attention has been given to providing those extra conveniences, which should be included in a pastor's home.

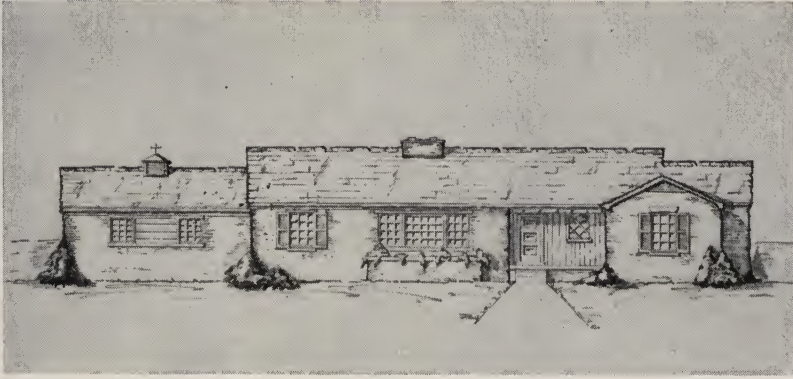

To appreciate this plan a close study must be made of each individual room.

An appropriate setting for this home would be a large, well shaded lot.

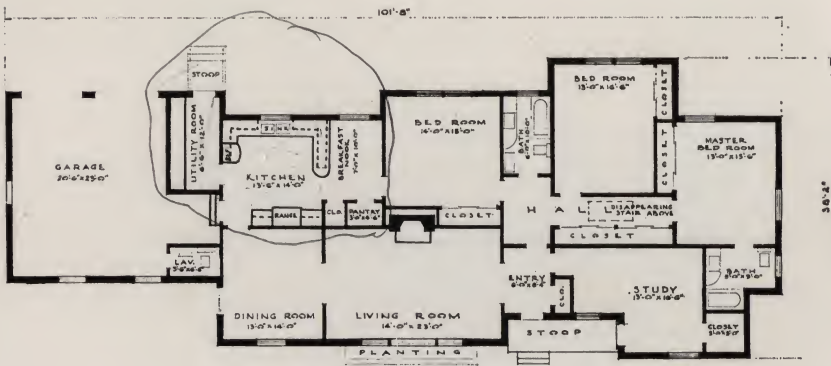

The total area of this house is 2,676 square feet.
